How Jackie Robinson paved way for wonderful World Baseball Classic

Jackie Robinson broke baseball's color barrier in 1947 for the Brooklyn Dodgers.

When Shohei Ohtani faced Mike Trout in the ninth inning of the championship game of the World Baseball Classic, it was a dramatic, historic moment.

Ohtani and Trout, teammates with the LA Angels but playing for their respective countries in the WBC, are future Hall of Famers and arguably the two best players in the game today.

The drama was so intense it was like watching Babe Ruth face Walter Johnson. Or Bob Gibson staring down Hank Aaron or Willie Mays.

Ohtani, the first two-way star since Ruth, got the best of Trout, striking him out to clinch Japan's victory over a stacked U.S. team. It capped a thrilling tournament that proved that baseball is alive and well and still one of the greatest games in the world.

But if not for one man, we may have never even heard of Shohei Ohtani.

If not for one trail-blazing hero, we may not have witnessed the brilliance of the Latin American players who starred for Mexico (Randy Arozarena), Puerto Rico (Francisco Lindor), Venezuela (Jose Altuve, Ronald Acuna Jr., Salvador Perez) or the Dominican Republic (Manny Machado, Juan Soto).

If not for Jackie Robinson, we might not have even gotten to see black major league stars Mookie Betts and Tim Anderson shine for the United States.

Robinson paved the way for all those players, and thousands more, to display their immense talent in the major leagues and on the world's biggest stage.

When Robinson broke baseball's color barrier in 1947, it opened the door for such legendary players as Aaron, Mays, Gibson and every black player who has ever donned a major league uniform.

For Hall of Famers Roberto Clemente, Orlando Cepeda, David Ortiz and thousands of other Latin American stars.

And, yes, even for Ohtaini, Ichiro and Masanori Murakami, the first Japanese star to play Major League Baseball in 1964.

Robinson's enormous bravery, strength and perseverance gave other black and minority athletes the courage to prove that they could indeed play America's game just as well as, and often better, than white players.

Robinson not only broke down the barrier in baseball, but his heroism helped open the door for black athletes to enter the NBA and other sports.

Three years after Robinson debuted for the Brooklyn Dodgers, Earl Lloyd, Chuck Cooper and Nat "Sweetwater" Clifton became the NBA's first black players, paving the way for such basketball legends as Bill Russell, Oscar Robertson and Wilt Chamberlain.

Robinson even had an indirect hand in the re-integration of the NFL. Though Fritz Pollard became the league's first black player in 1920, the NFL soon became segregated again until 1946, when four men broke that color barrier. One of them was Kenny Washington, Robinson's baseball and football teammate at UCLA.

One of history's most impactful civil rights activists, Robinson paved the way for every black and minority athlete playing a game today. And in a way he touched the lives of every sports fan who has attended a game or watched on TV in the past 76 years.

Aaron, one of baseball's greatest players and it's true home run king, spent much of his post-career making sure young black players knew of the legacy of Jackie Robinson.

"It would really disturb me if I went into a locker room and found a black player who didn't know what players like Jackie Robinson, Larry Doby and Don Newcombe did," wrote Aaron, who endured his own share of racial injustice in the 1950s and '60s. "Things were very tough back in those days — and it was Jackie Robinson who paved the way. Jackie Robinson was a pillar of strength for me."

We celebrate the legacy of Robinson in this issue (appropriately dated April 15, Jackie Robinson Day) by looking back at the trading cards from his 10-year career. From his very first card in 1947 to the 1956 Topps card from his final season, Robinson cards are among the most cherished and valuable in the hobby.

As one Robinson card collector pointed out, that's as it should be.

Nick Brower's AAN Collect fills need for local card shop in Central N.Y.

Nick Brower's AAN Collect shop in New Hartford, N.Y. features a wide range of collectibles, from trading cards to Funko Pops and sports memorabilia.

If you read my introductory column six months ago you know the importance of local card shops, especially in the central New York area where we have a void.

For Episode 222 of the Sports Card Nation podcast, I recently made the 45-minute trek to a new LCS in New Hartford, N.Y. owned by my friend Nick Brower.

AAN Collect is located in a busy strip mall. Upon entering the store the vast inventory is immediately apparent. Brower carries an impressive amount of sports wax but also stocks a great line of Pokémon and gaming cards as well. He also has one of the largest Funko Pop inventories I've seen in person. If that wasn't enough, he also carries non-Funko figures. On the east wall are certified autographed jerseys and memorabilia available for purchase as well.

Business has been so brisk early on that he's considering expanding the shop into the vacant retail space next door.

Aside from the impressive inventory, Brower attributes his early success to the shop's location and collectors in the area, but I also know it's his attention to detail and willingness to appeal to and help all collectors and serve all the different facets and ages of the hobby.

His pricing is not only attractive to collectors and fellow dealers alike, his three daughters are a constant reminder of how important kids are to him, his business and the future of the hobby.

So what led him to launch AAN Collect in 2023? As a 6-year-old, he took notice of both of his uncle's card collections. His first foray into retail was setting up at mall shows in the '90s and wheeling and dealing with his fellow dealers.

Like many he took a pause but returned in 2008 to a much different looking hobby. He threw his hat into breaking in 2010 on BlogTV and was one of the early breakers. In 2019 he headed up the launch of a full-time LCS by setting up products in vendor mall locations.

Last year we met up at the National Sports Collectors Convention in Atlantic City, so I asked him if a trip to The National in Chicago this year would be more difficult now with a full-time store. He said it was 50/50 but iffy.

However, his super supportive wife ran the store for the first time while we both set up at the Sunday New York State Fairgrounds show. She passed with flying colors so maybe a rendezvous to the windy city is not off the card table.

1973 TOPPS WORLD SERIES CARD CHANGED MY LIFE

Rising Costs Harm Joy of Collecting

My first memory is a baseball card. I was 3 years old when Topps #208 REDS SLUGGING TIES SERIES changed my life. I didn't know that it featured Johnny Bench (my future favorite player) or the Cincinnati Reds (my future favorite team). I didn't even understand what was happening in the amazing action shot; I thought they were doing calisthenics. I do know the color and action featured on this masterpiece sucked me into a hobby I have been obsessed with for 50 years.

From the day I pulled it from my brother's stash of '73s nestled neatly in that Converse All-Star box, I couldn't stop looking at it. I even remember taking it out to dinner that night. My grandparents were in town and they were taking the entire family out to a "fancy" dinner. ... The card was my guest. It sat at the table with me ... and everyone thought it was hilarious, but I was dead serious.

Later that summer the card ended up the victim of a pop-up rain shower. My brother got caught up in a savage game of wiffle ball and when he got called in for dinner he left that shoe box under a neighbor's tree. It ended up in the middle of a big loaf of cockled mess. As Roger Daltrey would say "oh how I cried that night."

Kids today don't understand that back then you couldn't just click a couple buttons and get a new one. There were no card shops or shows in the area. Once it was gone, it was gone. ... It took me 13 years to track down old #208. I found it at a local card shop. The problem was I was supposed to be picking up my tuxedo for the prom. I ended up buying a bunch of 1972 Reds cards and came up a little short on the tux. I still got one, but not the one that matched her dress. I still think I made the right decision. The girl is long gone, but the '72s remain.

At this point I probably have at least 10 [copies] of #208 in various conditions. Around the mid-90s card collecting got to be too much for an old-school like myself. The endless sets and chase cards kind of ruined the hobby for me. Luckily my wife introduced me to the internet and my interest came roaring back. 1970s baseball is my passion and this made it possible to find all the cards I had only dreamed of having at an affordable price. I now have pretty much everything you can think of from the decade. Bless you eBay!

For the last 25 years I have spent roughly a couple hours a day searching for things I have never seen before. ... My passion for all things baseball has made my life better. I don't know where I would be without my collection.

Scott Rice,
Massillon, Ohio

I starting collecting again after college. My go-to place was Paper Chase in Decatur Ga. It was a large used bookstore but they also had thousands of cards in big boxes. One day a collector said I should look at football cards. Even though the cards were not of the highest grades I was able to put together complete 1953-55 Bowman football sets just from their stash.

Today I primarily collect presidential autographs but I also have every Topps Braves baseball card from 1951 to 2022; every Aaron, Spahn, etc. I have a game-used jersey from every MLB team. My best jerseys are a Ron Reed Braves flannel and a Braves World Series jersey.

The state of card collecting now is highly speculative. I cannot believe you can purchase a year-old Panini basketball card for the cost of a Honus Wagner. Also prices for '52 Mantles. Too many of them out there to demand those prices. When the bubble bursts, the last ones will be holding near worthless cardboard. Just remember Bitcoin!

Ron Zell,
Berkeley Lake, Ga.

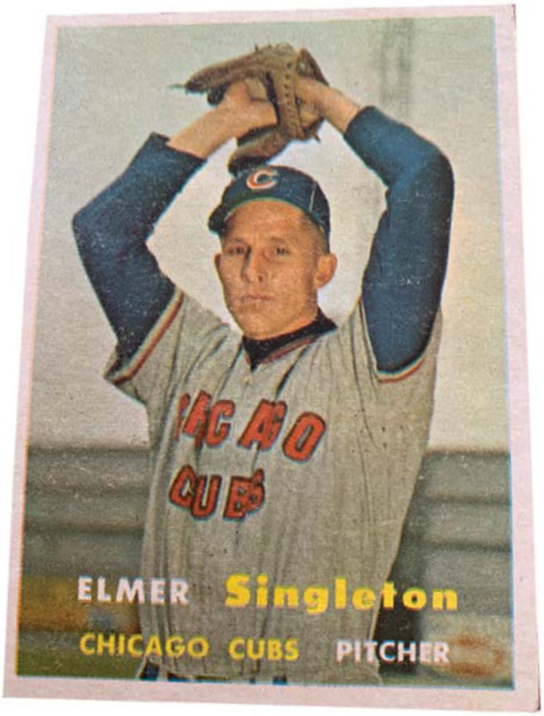
As I look at my collection my favorite cards are from the early-60s, both baseball and football. The first packs I remember opening were 1960 Topps Baseball cards and I vividly remember my dad bringing me a couple packs of 1960 Fleer Football cards. I still have many of both sets. Vintage cards from the '60s and '70s are what I continue to collect regardless of condition. Cards from the past bring back so many memories.

My two most memorable moments are probably when I finally completed the 1960 Topps Football set and the 1978 Topps Baseball set. Both took a while, especially the '78 set. That one took me about three or four years to complete. I was able to complete both sets in the late-90s before the price of cards really took off.

Current state of the hobby: In my opinion, terrible. I hate that the joy of collecting for fun has been taken away by grading and the emphasis on the value of cards. I think back at how easy it was for me to collect cards as a kid and wonder how today's kids can collect cards at today's prices. Current cards are way overpriced. Many of the cards I see mentioned in your publication would require me to take out a second mortgage on my house to afford. And don't get me started on the price of packs and boxes these days. That is why I don't collect current cards.

I have enjoyed SCD for many years (just renewed my subscription for another year). It has helped me through your advertisers and your articles from time to time on vintage sets. Keep up the good work.

Kent Schmitt,
Lumberton, Texas



Back in the '60s when I was in the Air Force, a Lieutenant came up to me and asked "was I related to Elmer Singleton." Our last names were displayed on our uniforms. My dad's name is Elmer Singleton as well. Of course, I knew he was talking about the baseball player.

I remember trading for the card with my best friend when I was about 10 or 11 years old. I was really proud of that card. In fact, I thought that my dad actually resembled the picture on the card. The baseball player was born in Utah and my dad was born in West Tennessee and there is no relation.

I responded to the Lieutenant and said, "Yes sir, he's my dad." I don't remember if I explained the circumstance to him or not. I probably did, but either way, I was telling the truth.

Glynn Singleton,
Bartlett, Tenn.

When I read about the millions other collectors invest in building a #1 on the set registry collection or snagging a Mantle rookie, I just smile. As a retired public school teacher, I need to set my sights a bit lower. I'm currently working on a 1965 Topps Baseball set in EXMT to NM and a 2001 Legendary Cuts Debut bat insert set — challenging yet affordable goals for me.

But I'm here to tell you the hobby is big enough for collectors of almost every budget. Obtaining autographs through the mail has been a way for hobbyists to build their collections, and that avenue continues to this day. All you need is a little patience.

Last summer, legendary Milwaukee Brewers broadcaster Bob Uecker signed a ball for me and his personal assistant sent it to my home by return mail. What a thrill to add this gem to my collection of Ford Frick award-winning Hall of Fame broadcasters! I had to wait more than a year in this instance, since "Mr. Baseball" decided not to sign items during the height of the COVID pandemic. I now have autographs of 37 of the 47 Ford Frick winners, and so far I didn't have to break the bank (although that might not be the case for the final 10).

The patience mantra was never more evident than on March 11 when I opened my mailbox and found an SASE that I mailed off in — wait for it — 2009. Yes, former Cleveland Indians and Seattle Mariners manager Eric Wedge finally got around to signing and returning my 2009 Topps Heritage card — 14 years later. Wedge stepped away from his most recent managerial post at Wichita State in December of 2022, citing health concerns. I guess he finally has the time to attend to this chore, and I thank him for it enthusiastically.

Chuck Kappus,
Albuquerque, N.M.

PSA will begin grading more Star Basketball sets. (PHOTO CREDIT: PSA)

PSA began grading the popular and controversial Star Basketball cards last year, beginning with the 1984-85 set that includes the first official trading cards of Hall of Famers Michael Jordan, Charles Barkley and Hakeem Olajuwon.

PSA is now accepting submissions for the remaining balance of Star sets released between 1983-1986.

PSA stopped grading Star cards in the early 1990s due to issues surrounding the legitimacy of several cards that surfaced after the card manufacturer lost its NBA license and started liquidating assets. But after reviewing the Star situation last year, PSA says enough information is now available to properly examine and grade the cards.

Star sets now eligible for grading include: 1983 Star All Stars; 1983-84 Star; 1984 Larry Bird; 1984 Celtics Champions; 1984 All-Stars; 1984 Slam Dunk; 1984 All-Star Game Denver Police; 1983-84 All Rookies; 1983-84 Sixers Champions; 1984 Award Banquet (label 1984); 1984 Arena Sets (Label all 1984 sans Celtics, which is 1984-85); 1984-85 Julius Erving; 1984-85 Mr. Z's Pizza; 1985 Miller Lite; 1985 Coaches; 1985 Kareem Abdul Jabbar; 1985 Gatorade; 1985 Crunch 'n Munch; 1985-86 All Rookies; 1985 Rookie of the Year; 1985 Schick; 1985 Bucks Card Night; 1986 Bucks Lifebuoy; 1986 Nets Lifebuoy; 1985 Team Supers 5x7; 1985 Slam Dunk Supers 5x7; 1984-85 Court Kings Supers 5x7; 1986 Best of the Old; 1986 Court Kings' 1984-85 Franz Bread; and 1985-86 Franz Bread.

PSA is also expanding its card grading services to include confirmed artist sketch cards and metal Pokémon cards.

PWCC LAUNCHES BREAKER NETWORK

PWCC Marketplace has launched a new Breaker Network to help create a more seamless and secure process for buying, selling and trading ultra-modern cards for breakers and their customers.

The new PWCC Breaker Network offers: authentication; high-resolution imaging and digital portfolio management; accurate card identification; fraud prevention; free cash advances; and immediate access to multiple marketplaces. Raw cards will be authenticated by MBA Authentic, while PWCC also works with card-grading partners CSG, SGC and Beckett.

Raw cards can be shipped directly from Breaker Network partners to PWCC. Breaker partners include: Crave, Indy Card Exchange, Jaspys, La Fav, Roadshow Cards, The Card Plugz and The Coffee Breakers.

UPPER DECK SERIES ONE GETS NEW LOOK

For the first time in more than 20 years, Upper Deck's flagship Series One hockey set will get a refresh, including more hit cards, parallels and inserts.

PWCC
NETWORK™

The longstanding hobby configuration of eight cards per pack and 24 packs per box will now feature 12 cards per pack and 12 packs per box. 2023-24 Upper Deck Series One will feature an increased number of inserts per pack and an expanded base set parallel lineup (three inserts per hobby pack on average). Some key aspects will remain the same, including the coveted Young Guns card count at an average of six per box, as well as the UD Canvas cards at an average of four per box.

The refresh will eventually be applied to the entire Upper Deck product line, which includes Series One, Series Two and Extended.

PSA TO GRADE CARDS IN EUROPE

PSA has formed a partnership with Dave & Adam's to create a PSA submission center in the Netherlands.

Starting in March, PSA will have a kiosk inside Dave & Adam's new store that opened last year in Roermond, Netherlands. It will serve as a trading card submission center for card orders that will be shipped on a bi-weekly basis to PSA headquarters in Santa Ana, Calif. Dave & Adam's will also have an online portal for customers to submit their cards at dacardworld.eu. Customers will have the option to either have their graded cards shipped back to them or pick them up at the store.

FANATICS HIRES NEW CMO

Fanatics Collectibles has hired a new chief marketing officer to market trading cards to more fans and potential new collectors.

Ken Turner, formerly the executive vice president and chief marketing officer at Red Bull North America, will help build Fanatics' marketing organization and oversee brand vision, strategy and marketing efforts for both physical and digital collectibles, including for Topps.

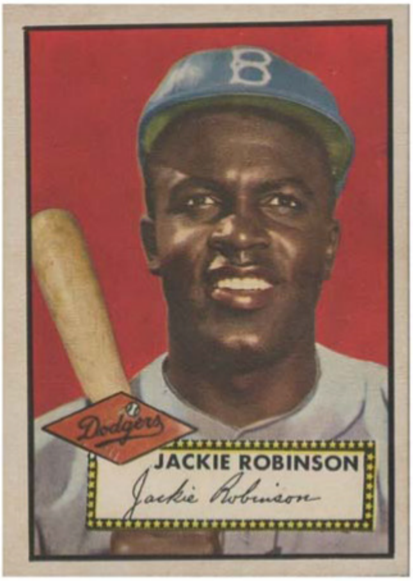
Check out this awesome vintage photograph of Jackie Robinson. The Acme News release is dated April 11, 1947 — just after Robinson arrived in a Brooklyn Dodgers uniform to break baseball's color barrier.

The well-detailed photograph shows Robinson during practice at Ebbets Field leaping high in the air for an errant throw around first base. While it drew only two bids on eBay, it brought a healthy price: $7,000.

On the other hand, an impressive 1952 Topps Robinson card inspired 98 bids on eBay in early March. The competition helped it soar to $36,203, putting it on our Top 10 chart last time out. The eBay seller touted the card's centering, but the photograph shows it's far from perfect — crooked and off to one side. The real story with this card is its preservation; the bright coloring gives it a bold and crisp eye appeal, no doubt a key to its PSA 7 grade.

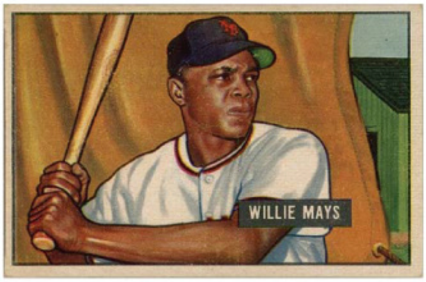
By the way, Robinson's 1952 Topps card, if bearing a Gem-Mint 9 grade, can draw obscene prices. Goldin Auctions sold a PSA 9 specimen for $984,000 in 2021. Heritage Auctions got $960,000 for a PSA 9 Robby, also in 2021.



To put Jackie's 1952 card in context, he was coming off a 1951 season that would have made fantasy baseball owners very happy: He hit .338 with 19 homers, 106 runs, 88 RBI and 25 steals. Before the 1952 season began, he turned 33 but went on to produce similar numbers: a .308 average with 19 homers, 103 runs, 75 RBI and 24 steals.

THE SAY HEY KID

Say hey! Willie Mays turns 92 on May 6, and his stature continues to grow. Those who saw him play know why. For those who came after Mays'



22-year career (he started with the New York Giants in 1951 and ended with the New York Mets in 1973), the stats tell the story: a .career 301 average, 660 homers and 339 steals. He won 12 Gold Gloves, appeared in 24 All-Star games and earned a Rookie of the Year award and two NL MVPs. Along the way, he flashed countless smiles on and around the ballfield.

Mays' 1951 Bowman rookie card is a beauty. It's horizontally designed and features a striking and colorful illustration of The Say-Hey Kid in a batting pose.

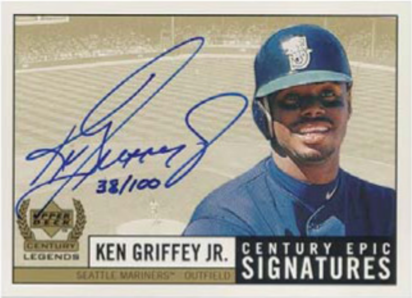
In March, we spotted a PSA 6 example on eBay, and it sold for $22,761. On the surface, it's an impressive price, but it reflects the notion that Mays is undervalued in the hobby. An 8-grade Mays rookie has been selling for between $165,000 and $265,000, per realized prices from the past three years. A 1951 Mickey Mantle in 8 condition sells for double that range. (Two Mantle PSA 8 examples in 2021 showed prices of $615,000, and another in 2022 brought $504,000.)

Still, a five-figure price is a five-figure price. Dying to get your hands on a Mays rookie without paying that much? Drop your condition expectations. We've seen the following change hands on eBay in recent months:

- A PSA 2.5 example sold for $6,165 on 43 bids.
- A PSA 1 brought $4,995 on 26 bids. Two other PSA 1s fetched prices of $4,773 on 74 bids and $4,551 on 49 bids.
- An ungraded but SGC-authenticated example went for $2,762 on 41 bids.

Clearly, per the bidding activity, collectors want Mays' rookie even in "well-loved" condition.

THE KID: JUNIOR

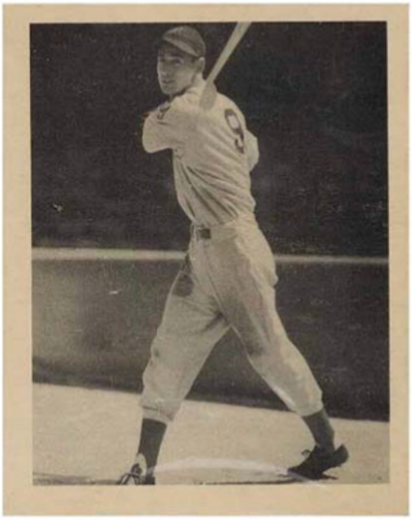


Ken Griffey Jr. was in the news in March after taking batting practice before a World Baseball Classic contest. During his session, he wowed current players who idolized him during his long career. Video clips went viral of The Kid — a little beefier but with that trademark backwards-facing hat — taking his whacks and getting a rise out of USA players when he went deep. Many current players could be seen capturing the moment on cellphones.

The same week, we saw Griffey getting love from collectors when a seller offered a rare 1999 autographed Upper Deck Century Legends Gold card. Marked #38/100 and graded PSA 10, it sold for $18,600 on 48 bids.

The card came out at a key juncture in Griffey's career. In 1999, he was 29 and at his absolute peak. Consider his stats the two previous seasons. In 1997, he hit 56 homers with 147 RBI. In 1998, he had almost identical numbers, hitting 56 homers with 146 RBI. And in 1999, he followed up with another monster season, blasting 48 more homers with 134 RBI.

THE ORIGINAL KID



If we're giving ink to The Kid and The Say-Hey Kid, then it behooves us to squeeze in the original Kid — Teddy Ballgame. So here's a look at his 1939 Play Ball, a classic card that gave us this understatement on the flip side: "Ted Williams, one of the youngest players in baseball, has a great future … ." He sure did. Over 19 seasons, he batted a loud .344 with 521 homers.

Recent eBay listings show Williams's 1939 Play Ball card selling for prices of:

- $13,620 on 69 bids for a PSA 7.
- $10,666 on 49 bids for a PSA 6.
- $7,989 on 35 bids for a PSA 5.

SHOHEI: BOTH SIDES NOW

For the past five seasons, Shohei Ohtani has been filling baseball card backs with stats, both hitting and pitching. In 2022, the two-way Angels star clobbered 34 homers, drove in 95 runs and batted .273, while posting a 15-9 record and 2.33 ERA on the mound. He also struck out 219 batters in 166 innings. Whew!

Still only 28, Ohtani is poised to break out further in 2023. Collectors are all over him, too. Recent transactions on eBay include a signed Blue Refractor version of his 2018 Bowman Chrome card that fetched $19,000 on 47 bids. It was one of only 150 made and had been graded PSA 10.

SHOHEI OHTANI

A signed Atomic Refractor of the same card (BGS 9.5) brought $12,700 on 33 bids. And a Gold Refractor (BGS 9.5) brought $9,752 on 39 bids; it was marked #9/50.

Then there's this historical item: a 2022 Topps Sterling triple-autographed relic card featuring Ohtani along with fellow Japanese imports Ichiro Suzuki and Hideki Matsui. Bearing pieces of game-used memorabilia along with authenticated signatures of the three, the ungraded card brought $6,999 on 55 bids. It was marked #4/5.

MORE '52 MANTLE CARDS HIT MARKET; OHTANI MEMORABILIA HOT

MICKEY MANTLE

BASEBALL HALL OF FAME
WILLIAMS
OUTFIELDER

Heritage Auctions made big headlines last year when it sold a 1952 Topps Mickey Mantle card, graded SGC 9.5, for $12.6 million, an all-time sports card record.

Heritage continues to be the go-to source for testing the market on the hobby's most iconic card. A '52 Mantle graded SGC VG 3 topped its March Sports Showcase, selling for $56,640.

Heritage has at least three more '52 Mantles in its May Spring Sports Catalog Auction. A PSA 7 version has an estimated value of $400,000 or more, while a PSA 6 is valued at $160,000 and a PSA 5 at $120,000.

Heritage's spring auction is loaded with high-end cards and memorabilia, including Ted Williams' 1966 Baseball Hall of Fame ring ($150,000 and up) and a 1946 Williams game-used bat ($120,000 and up). Other intriguing items include a ticket stub to Michael Jordan's 1984 NBA debut and a ticket to the 1982 NCAA Finals starring Jordan and his North Carolina Tar Heels (both valued at $100,000 and up).

SHOHEI JERSEY UP FOR BID

After Shohei Ohtani struck out Angels teammate Mike Trout to clinch Japan's victory over the U.S. in the finals of the World Baseball Classic, the Baseball Hall of Fame acquired the cap Ohtani was wearing during the finals. It was among several artifacts the Hall acquired from the Classic, including Trea Turner's spikes and batting glove.

As the WBC wound to a close, Goldin Co. also had an Ohtani jersey up for bid. The May 14, 2022 game-used, signed Angels jersey from Ohtani's 100th career home run was approaching $100,000 with just a few days remaining in the auction, which closed March 29.

BABE CARDS LEAD WAY

The $1.2 million March Encore Auction at Robert Edward Auctions was highlighted by multiple 1933 Goudey Babe Ruth cards that all topped five figures.

A 1933 Goudey #149 Babe Ruth (SGC VG/EX 4) led the way, selling for $21,000, while a 1933 Goudey #144 Ruth (SGC VG/EX 4) went for $18,600. Another Goudey #144 (PSA VG 3.5) sold for $15,600, while a 1933 Goudey #181 (SGC 4.5) totaled $13,800. Another Ruth #149 (PSA 2.5) netted $12,600 and a #53 (SGC 2.5) drew $12,000.

Another 1933 Goudey card, Lou Gehrig's #37 (SGC 5), also topped five figures, selling for $10,200. Other key vintage cards in the auction included: 1948-1949 Leaf Jackie Robinson Rookie (PSA VG-EX 4) for $17,400; 1957 Topps Mickey Mantle (PSA 8) for $12,600; and a 1909-1911 T206 White Border Ty Cobb Portrait Red Background Old Mill Back (PSA VG 3) for $9,900.

ARTHUR ASHE CARD SETS RECORD

Arthur Ashe's rare rookie card sold for a record $5,160 in the March Premier Auction at PWCC Marketplace.

Ashe was the first black tennis star to win three ATP Grand Slam tournaments. PWCC's Jesse Craig called his 1966 Ruiz Romero Futbol Tenis Ciclismo card, graded PSA 2, "one of the finest vintage tennis collectibles in existence." The sale was the highest-selling card of all time for the trail-blazing star.

Jackie Robinson cards tell story of one of most iconic players in baseball history

It is virtually impossible to overstate the impact Jackie Robinson had on baseball, American sports and society as a whole.

When Robinson broke the Major League Baseball color barrier in 1947, he paved the way for thousands of black players and minority athletes in other sports.

If not for Robinson, some of the greatest players in the history of the game might never have gotten the opportunity to play professional baseball, including Hall of Famers like Hank Aaron, Willie Mays, Roberto Clemente and baseball's first black player/manager Frank Robinson.

Aaron, who broke Babe Ruth's all-time home run record, called Robinson "an icon."

"He was a pillar of strength, and he gave me a lot of inner strength," Aaron wrote in Robinson's autobiography, "I Never Had It Made."

"I knew some of the things he had gone through; so, when I looked at him, I thought, not only is this man a great athlete, but he's a great man off the field for people like myself. He gave me the strength I needed to go forward."

Even Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the leader of the 1960s civil rights movement, credited Robinson with paving the way for minorities of all walks of life.

"Jackie Robinson made my success possible," Dr. King once said. "Without him, I would never have been able to do what I did."

A four-sport star athlete in high school and college, Robinson starred in the Negro Leagues before making an immediate impact on the major leagues. Despite facing tremendous pressure and racial discrimination, he was the 1947 MLB Rookie of the Year, the 1949 NL MVP, a six-time All-Star and led the Brooklyn Dodgers to six National League pennants and the 1955 World Series title.

He was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in 1962 but the celebration of his legacy doesn't stop there. Robinson is honored by all of baseball each year on April 15, when every uniform throughout the league bears his famous No. 42.

In recent years, the sports collectible hobby has also honored Robinson with the rise in popularity and value of his trading cards and memorabilia.

Several Robinson items — from game-worn jerseys, game-used bats and even a questionnaire he once filled out — have all topped $1 million in the past two years, while his iconic trading cards continue to command big dollars.

"There are very few people who have altered the course of history the way Jackie Robinson did," said Ken Goldin, founder and executive chairman of Goldin Co. "Jackie not only broke the color barrier and forever changed baseball, but he broke down racial barriers that for too long segregated American society. His courage and strength in the face of ignorance are a continued inspiration and handling the sale of these items — the tools that he used to change the world — is a true honor."

"Jackie Robinson has always been a foundational figure in our field, but I think the appreciation for him and his associated memorabilia has grown exponentially over the last five to 10 years," said Dan Imler, vice president of Heritage Sports. "People have really woken up to his historical impact, and the interest in his elite material has accelerated at a greater rate than for any other figure."

Robinson baseball cards from his 10-year career have also seen a big spike in recent years, with his top cards routinely topping six figures and pushing $1 million.

"He was an amazing guy. And if you have any respect for the game, you know the significance of Jackie Robinson and what he did and what he went through," said vintage baseball card collector Mike Moynihan, who has a large collection of Robinson cards. "I have nothing but love for Jackie Robinson."

As we celebrate Jackie Robinson Day, we take a look at 12 of Robinson's most popular and valuable cards.

1947 BOND BREAD

Robinson's first real baseball card was distributed in 1947 by Bond Bread. The Brooklyn bakery released a 48-card multi-sport set that featured 44 baseball players, including the young Dodgers star.

The company also released a special promotional set of 13 Robinson cards the same year. Some believe this is Robinson's first "true" rookie card.

Value: $8,000 (EX 5)

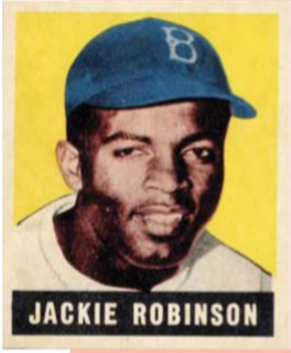
1948 LEAF #79

Robinson's most iconic card was distributed by Leaf in 1948, though some believe it wasn't released until 1949 (the copyright on the back says 1948).

It is widely regarded as Robinson's official rookie card, with a PSA 8 example selling for $468,000 last year at Heritage. Old Sports Cards says it is the "only one true rookie card for Jackie Robinson," while Cardboard Connection calls it "one of the most important Jackie Robinson cards in existence.

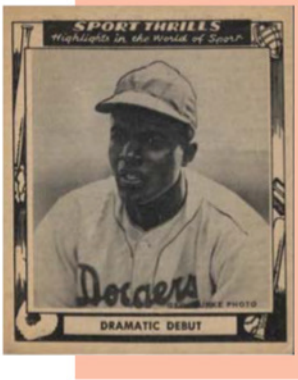
Value: $7,500-$800,000
(VG 3-MINT 9)



1948 SWELL SPORT THRILLS #3

The rare Swell Sport set features "highlights in sports" with card #3 focusing on Robinson's "dramatic debut" in 1947 — the first card to spotlight the historic significance of Robinson breaking the color barrier.

Value: $3,900-$12,500
(GOOD 2-NM 7)

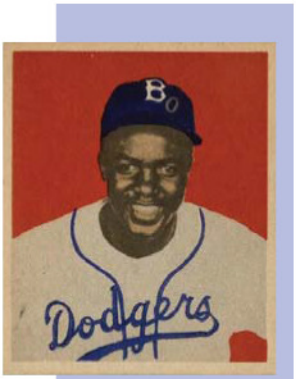


1949 BOWMAN #50

Robinson's 1949 season was his best as he hit .342 to win the NL MVP. Fittingly, he was featured in Bowman's first colorized set, flashing Dodger blue on a red background.

Due to the controversy surrounding the date of the 1948 Leaf card, many consider the 1949 Bowman card a Robinson rookie card as well. Though not nearly as valuable due to poor print quality, a PSA 9 version sold for $360,000 in 2021.

Value: $3,250-$361,300
(GOOD 2-MINT 9)

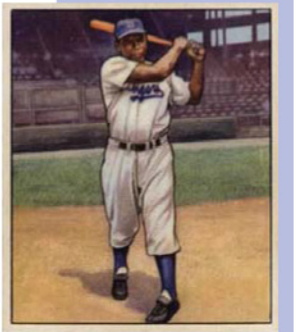


1950 BOWMAN #22

While Robinson's first few cards featured a portrait-style image, the 1950 Bowman art card was his first action card, showing the trail-blazing star taking a practice swing.

The full-color painting of Robinson on the field in his blue and white Dodger uniform is widely regarded as one of his most attractive cards. Old Sports Cards calls its "simply beautiful." "It may not be his most expensive, but collectors still love this card."

Value: $3,000-$119,000
(VG 3-MINT 9)

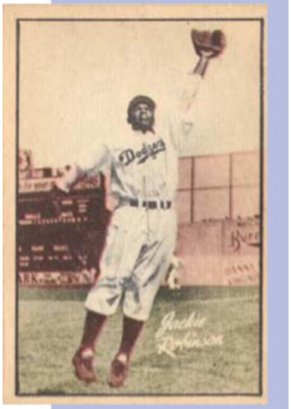


1952 BERK ROSS

The odd image of Robinson leaping for a ball at Ebbets Field is almost as mysterious as the background and origin of the Berk Ross set.

Manufactured by the Berk Ross Co. of New York City, the unnumbered 72-card set features Robinson and other legendary players like Mickey Mantle, Willie Mays, Joe DiMaggio, Stan Musial and Ted Williams. The Robinson card is more affordable than most of his other vintage cards.

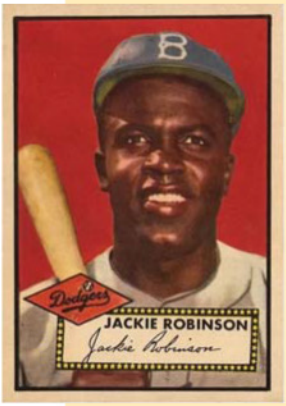
Value: $950-$105,000
(VG 3-MINT 9)



1952 TOPPS #312

Including one of baseball's most important and impactful stars in one of the hobby's most iconic sets alongside Mantle and Mays makes this one of Robinson's must-have cards.

His first Topps card, which shows a smiling Robinson with a bat slung over his shoulder on a bright red background, has become an iconic image in the hobby. According to Wax Pack Gods, "Jackie looks like a movie star, and this card is hobby royalty."

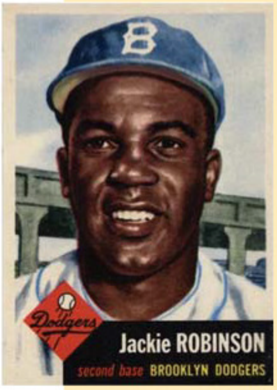


Dodgers
JACKIE ROBINSON
Jackie Robinson

A PSA 9 example holds the record for Robinson cards, selling for $984,000 at Goldin in 2021.

Value: $6,300-$970,000 (GOOD 2-MINT 9)

1953 TOPPS #1



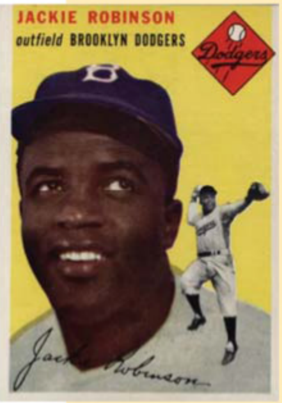
Dodgers
Jackie ROBINSON
second base BROOKLYN DODGERS

In 1953, Topps firmly recognized Robinson as one of baseball's top stars, designating his card as #1 in the popular set.

It is considered one of the most beautiful of Robinson cards, with the artwork depicting a smiling Robinson in his Dodger cap with an image of the Brooklyn bridge in the background. Though valuable, the card can be hard to find in top condition due to centering and chipping issues.

Value: $1,396-$252,000 (GOOD 2-MINT 9)

1954 TOPPS #10



JACKIE ROBINSON
outfield BROOKLYN DODGERS
Dodgers
Jackie Robinson

Topps unveiled its first two-image design in 1954 and Robinson's card features a familiar smiling portrait packaged with an odd-looking posed action shot of him fielding.

Though it gets mixed reactions from collectors and is hard to find in top condition, the facsimile autograph is a bonus and many collectors love the colorful design. Wax Pack Gods says, "Like pretty much every Jackie Robinson card of the era, this bright yellow beauty is instantly recognizable and stands as a hobby favorite for generations of collectors."

Value: $560-$60,000 (VG-EX 4-MINT 9)

1955 TOPPS #50

Topps stuck with a similar look in 1955, but flipped the images on a horizontal design. It features another smiling headshot flanked by a posed image of Robinson swinging a bat with his signature placed under the action shot.

The card was a special one because it was the year Robinson led the Dodgers to its first World Series championship.

Value: $577-$74,700 (VG-EX 4-MINT 9)

1956 TOPPS #30

Topps finally got it right in 1956, making his final card as an active player one of his most beautiful and a hobby favorite.

The portrait shot is the same as on the 1955 card, but the action shot is much more compelling, showing a Robinson sliding into home. The card is special because it was issued in the final season of Robinson's magnificent and historic career.

"I don't know that I could afford that card today but so glad that I have it," said Moynihan, who owns a PSA 5 example. "I love the '56 and just the way it looks, and that's his last playing days card."

Value: $503-$67,000 (VG-EX 4-MINT 9)

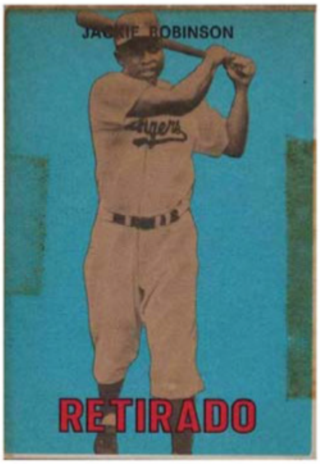
1967 TOPPS VENEZUELA #184



JACKIE ROBINSON
RETIRADO

This is an extremely rare card because Robinson was not included in the American version of the set. Instead, the plain card on a dull blue background was part of a 50-card subset of retired players.

Value: $350-$2,000 (VG 3-NM 7)

INTERNATIONAL ROOKIES

Before they reached the United States, superstars like Shohei Ohtani, Luka Doncic and Alex Ovechkin had rookie cards in other countries.

BY CLEMENTE LISI

The rookie card is sacrosanct among collectors. Debates over what is and isn't a rookie card, depending on the sport, continues to be a hot topic at shows and on message boards.

But the rookie card brouhaha is further complicated by another factor – cards featuring players who already appeared on a card in another country prior to playing in the United States.

Japanese baseball phenom Shohei Ohtani, NBA All-Star Luka Doncic and the NHL's Alexander Ovechkin may have little in common. All three, however, are some of the superstars who fall into this unique category. In fact, all three athletes appeared in foreign card sets before ever playing in the United States.

Some consider these appearances pre-rookie cards, others the actual rookie card. In fact, players who had a pro career before coming to a U.S.-based sports league fall into this ambiguous territory. Despite the ongoing debate over what constitutes a rookie card, some collectors and dealers see in these pieces of cardboard a chance to invest in something most others either ignore or don't even know exists.

This conundrum first appeared in the 1990s when players from across the world were signed to pro contracts in baseball, basketball and hockey. Major League Baseball saw Japanese players flocking to our shores, most notably after pitcher Hideo Nomo signed with the Los Angeles Dodgers. Nomo's success helped spur the wave of exceptional Japanese players who would sign with MLB clubs that decade and beyond.

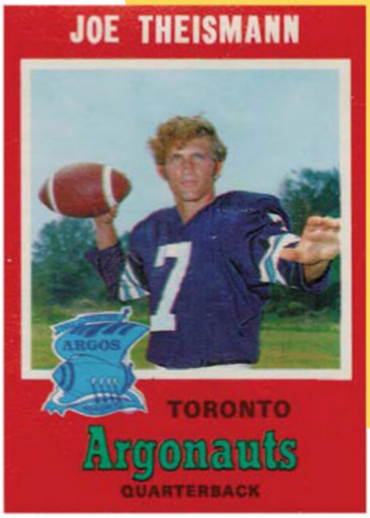
Nomo, for example, was named the 1995 National League Rookie of the Year. That same season, he would start in the All-Star game and lead the NL in strikeouts. Several other players followed Nomo, some of them possessing exceptional offensive skills. The one that stands out most is outfielder Ichiro Suzuki, who made his debut with the Seattle Mariners in 2001. Suzuki would go on to become a 10-time All-Star (in addition to being a seven-time All-Star in Japan). Named the 2001 American League MVP, the player known simply as Ichiro is likely to be a Hall of Famer when he appears on the ballot starting in 2024.

The NBA, meanwhile, became a global brand following the 1992 Summer Olympics in Barcelona. As a result, a crop of European players began playing here, including Vlade Divac, Gheorghe Muresan and Toni Kukoc. All became key players for much of that decade. Kukoc, for example, hailed from Croatia and was a member of the Michael Jordan-led Chicago Bulls teams. He would end up winning three straight NBA titles starting in 1996.

In the NHL, the fall of the Berlin Wall and the dissolution of the Soviet Union allowed Russian players like Pavel Bure and Sergei Federov to sign with North American teams. The pinnacle of this trend was when the Detroit Red Wings featured the "Russian Five" in the mid-90s. The five players were Fedorov, Vladimir Konstantinov, Slava Kozlov, Slava Fetisov and Igor Larionov. Red Wings coach Scotty Bowman played the five as a unit at times from October 1995 to June 1997. They won the Stanley Cup at the conclusion of the 1996-97 season.

What started in the '90s continues to this day. Foreign athletes continue to sign with American sports teams. As a result, many of them were featured in card sets not produced for sale in the United States. Here are 10 cards that fit this unique category.

1971 OPC CFL JOE THEISMANN ROOKIE CARD #13

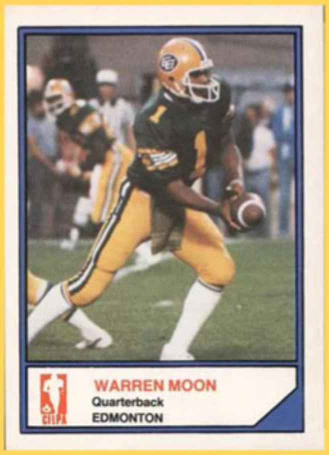


Theismann went from playing college football to the Canadian Football League. While O-Pee-Chee is hardly considered foreign to collectors these days, it was for decades only available in Canada and much-better known for hockey.

While Theismann was born in the United States, the CFL is not a U.S.-based sports league. Theismann's OPC rookie from 1971 shows him in a Toronto Argonauts uniform and predates his NFL debut by three years. The rookie is part of a 132-card set that is often hard to come by.

1983 JOGO CFL WARREN MOON

Before he became a big-time NFL quarterback, Moon, like Theismann, got his start north of the border with the Edmonton Eskimos. It is considered valuable due to its rarity and the first year that Canadian card manufacturer Jogo made cards featuring color photography and using a traditional card size set.



1991 BBM HIDEO NOMO #379

"Nomo-mania" swept the nation in 1995. The Japanese pitcher left hitters flummoxed with his tornado-like delivery and fastball. In making his MLB debut with the Dodgers, Nomo became the first Japanese player to excel in the majors. So much so, that Nomo was the first to spur interest in Japanese baseball cards among American collectors. Before Nomo ever appeared on a Topps card, he had been featured in several Japanese sets, most notably on this 1991 BBM card as a member of the Kintetsu Buffaloes.

1993 BBM ICHIRO SUZUKI #239

Before playing in the majors, Ichiro was a star in Japan. Put out by BBM under the auspicious of Japanese Baseball Magazine, the cards were first produced starting in 1991 and modeled after Topps.

For years, Japanese trading cards were either smaller than their American counterparts or made to resemble postcards. This Ichiro card shows him batting for the Orix Blue Wave of the Nippon Professional Baseball League. Many collectors consider this card — a year after his 1992 debut in Japan — his true rookie.

1993 BBM HIDEKI MATSUI #423

Like Ichiro, Hideki Matsui is one of those Japanese ballplayers remembered for his clutch hitting. Also featured in the same 1993 BBM as Ichiro, this 498-card set is among the most sought after by both North American and Asian collectors and coincides with Japanese players coming to play in MLB.

2001-02 RUSSIAN ICE ALEXANDER OVECHKIN #15

The value of Ovechkin cards — and variety of Upper Deck-issued rookies in particular — have skyrocketed as the Russian gets ever closer to potentially eclipsing Wayne Gretzky's record for NHL regular-season goals. His first appearance on any card can be found in the 2001-02 Russian Ice set, which showcases the future Washington Capitals star in a Dynamo Moscow uniform and face cage.

2013 BBM 1ST VERSION SHOHEI OHTANI #183

This is among the most sought after Ohtani base cards not featuring a Topps logo. The first version of Ohtani's BBM card — his first card ever as a pro ballplayer — shows him winding up to pitch. It's a truly iconic pose for a player who has achieved top status both in his homeland and in the majors.

2013 BBM 2ND VERSION SHOHEI OHTANI #554

One of two cards featuring Ohtani to appear in the 2013 BBM set, this card shows him batting. Before joining the Anaheim Angels in 2018, he played for the Hokkaido Hippon-Ham Fighters of Nippon Professional Baseball's Pacific League. After six seasons of pitching and playing outfield for them, he signed with the Angels and was named the 2018 American League Rookie of the Year.

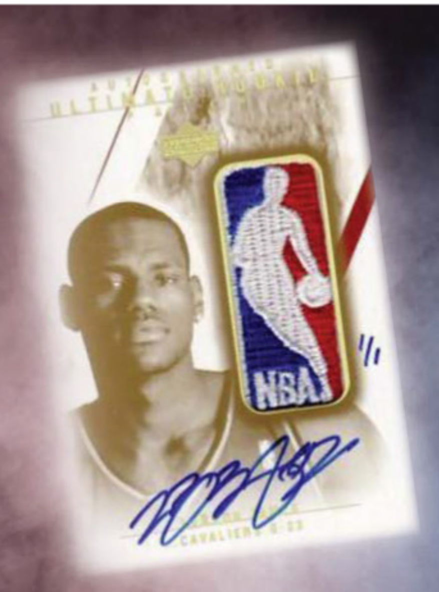
2013 BBM HOKKAIDO NIPPON-HAM FIGHTERS STADIUM EVENT SPECIAL EDITION SHOHEI OHTANI #PR12

Ohtani is largely viewed as the best player in the major leagues at the moment. Like Ichiro and Matsui, he previously played in Japan. Like them, he's excelled in North America. This special edition promo card depicts Ohtani both pitching and hitting — both things he does well — along with a red ink facsimile autograph. It is more rare than his two other BBM cards and versions in high grades can fetch thousands of dollars.

2016 UPPER DECK EUROLEAGUE AUTOGRAPH LUKA DONCIC #23

Doncic's Panini Prizm base, parallels and autograph cards may be all the rage, but he did appear in the 2016 Upper Deck Euroleague set before ever stepping foot on an NBA court. Considered ultra-rare, many Doncic fans want this card as part of their collection. Featured in a Real Madrid jersey, this autographed card (which is not numbered) also comes in Rainbow Foil versions.



This 1-of-1 2003 Upper Deck LeBron James Logoman card has never been seen in the United States and is believed to be in China.

INTERNATIONAL INTRIGUE

RARE, HIGH-END NBA CARDS BELIEVED TO BE OVERSEAS IN GROWING INTERNATIONAL CARD MARKET

GREG BATES

It could be considered the Loch Ness Monster of the trading card hobby.

LeBron James' 2003 Upper Deck Ultimate Collection Logoman autographed 1-of-1 — James' best card — has never surfaced in public.

The horizontal version of that card sold in 2016 for $312,000. However, the vertical example of this Superfractor has never been seen.

"It's the ultimate chase card for LeBron," said Jesse Craig, vice president of sales for PWCC Marketplace. "He didn't have a 1-of-1 autograph Logoman in Exquisite, so this is the only vertical '03 single Logoman signed by LeBron. It's probably a $20 to $25 million card."

So two full decades after Upper Deck released the rare James rookie, where could it be? Still sitting in an unopened pack somewhere?

Chances are, likely not.

"I've heard — this is the mystery of it all — it was pulled in China," said Collectors CEO Nat Turner, who is also a big-time NBA card collector. "One of the dual Logomans from '03 Exquisite, which I ended up getting, was in China. I've heard the Steph Curry 1-of-1 Superfractor might have been pulled years ago and is in China. No one has even been able to show me a picture of it. Like, who knows, you know."

Yes, that James rookie could be hidden in a private collection — dust mounting on a sleeve or One Touch — overseas.

NBA cards are huge on the international market, and the elusive James 1-of-1 is a prime example of the sport's popularity in foreign countries.

"There are monster cards hidden overseas, I guarantee that," Craig said. "The LeBron card, it's like this mythical creature, basically."

When Upper Deck was going to release its Ultimate product in 2003, it made a simple mock-up of the James card, Upper Deck President Jason Masherah said. The only thing remaining 20 years later is a low-resolution image on the internet.

"It's never been seen in the wild that I'm aware of," Craig said. "There are Green PMG [Precious Metal Gems from 1997-98 Skybox Metal Universe] Jordans that are unaccounted for. I know a couple of those are overseas. Green Kobes, there's Reds. A lot of these really high-end stuff from the '90s and Exquisite stuff, I would imagine is stuck overseas."

Earlier this year, PWCC took to auction a 2004 Exquisite Collection Magic Johnson Titleist, one of only five copies that exist. It sold for $50,000. The set is one of the rarest insert sets in the world.

"There are six Jordans, five Magics — they're all numbered to the number of championships they won — and there's only been two cards ever from that set sold at public auction," Craig said. "One was in 2005 on eBay, and then we just sold one. It's like a 40-something-card set. So, like where is all that stuff? Things like that make you go, a lot of that had to have been hit overseas and is just stuck over there in large collections."

If Craig had to guess, he thinks 70 percent of these big, rare cards from high-end NBA products have been pulled and 30 percent are still in boxes. There are so few Exquisite boxes left that haven't been opened.

When card flipper Dave Oancea sold his 2009 Bowman Chrome Mike Trout autographed Superfractor in August 2020, he told Sports Collectors Digest he purchased the card two years earlier from a collector in Asia for $400,000. Oancea sold the 1-of-1 for a then-hobby-record $3.9 million.

Turner, who was a part of a group that purchased Collectors, the parent company of PSA, in early 2021, believes collectors overseas are holding massive cards and aren't saying anything.

"I guarantee it," Turner said. "We have PSA China quietly open in Shanghai. We're accepting submissions. We have a 100-person Shanghai office now, mainly for coin grading."

Collectors' PCGS coin grading facility overseas has helped collectors send cards to get graded.

"There's no grading there yet for cards — we send them back to the United States — but we handle that for the customer," Turner said. “What we’re currently doing in Japan, basically, we’re doing that in Shanghai. There is a lot of demand for card grading.”

One big reason Turner and Craig believe big cards are sitting in international collections is because of the lack of grading accessibility. It’s not easy for an international collector to send card submissions to the United States, clear customs and risk the possibly of getting cards lost or stolen, as well as deal with the wait time for getting the cards back.

“I bet you that — and this is just gut feel — that half of the ungraded cards in our market are overseas,” Craig said. “And a lot of it’s high end.

“What happens is, you mentioned the kind of money that there is in Asia in general, well, those guys will buy chunks of high-end retail products when it comes out, have it shipped to them and then they open it — because they love doing that, it’s what they enjoy — then what do they do with the cards? They can’t get them graded. There’s no grading services over there. So they just stay ungraded, and that’s been happening for 20 years.”

Ponderosa Y.S. Ltd. is a large card distributor in Taiwan and throughout other Asian countries. Assistant manager of sales Tony Yang has heard some stories over the years of some big pulls overseas.

“The most impressive card is the 2016-17 Panini National Treasures Kobe Bryant Logoman auto 1-of-1,” Yang said. “We knew that there was a consumer pulled this card in Taiwan. In the earlier years of NBA cards market, many MJ big cards were pulled in Taiwan as well.

“There was a customer who focused on pulling the card packs and he collected dozens of Michael Jordan cards such as Exquisite auto patch, auto cards and so on. But he cleared out these cards [out of his] hands before 10 years ago, but he regrets that now. As you could imagine, the card value now is much higher than before. If they could keep the cards in hands, he could be a super-rich man now.”

Tony Yang of card distributor Ponderosa Y.S. Ltd. says several high-end Kobe Bryant and Michael Jordan cards have been pulled in Taiwan.

APPEAL OF NBA CARDS

Turner believes the appeal of basketball cards internationally stems from the success and exposure of the “Dream Team” that took the 1992 Barcelona Games by storm and then the following Olympics in ’96. Also former NBA commissioner David Stern pushed the popularity of the game across the Atlantic Ocean.

"I think China with Yao Ming in 2001 and then the outreach that the NBA did with using Kobe and LeBron, Stephon Marbury and all those that they would bring out there for exhibition games helped with popularity," Turner said.

Ming and Marbury are two big reasons the NBA is so huge in China. Both former court stars now reside in China where Ming is the president of the Chinese Basketball Association (CBA) and Marbury runs successful basketball camps for youth players.

"They've really latched on and attached themselves to American NBA players," Craig said. "Kobe, with his international reach, the fact that he spent part of his days growing up overseas and his dad playing overseas, Kobe has a cult-like following in Asia in general. The same goes for Steph Curry. They absolutely love Steph Curry over there. It's like Kobe's number one and Steph's probably number two, even ahead of Yao Ming."

Beckett Editorial Director Michael Payne said NBA cards are big worldwide, but the largest market is in China, he said. In the past 15 months, Beckett has gotten nearly 100,000 card submissions from Asian countries: 35,000 from Taiwan; 26,000 from Hong Kong; 17,000 from Japan; 16,000 from China; and 5,000 from Korea.

"There's been some situations between the U.S. and China, so I don't know where that takes us in the future," Payne said. "In Japan, they've had a couple of really good hobby shops there, and that has raised the level of the game there. It has raised awareness of the NBA and about trading cards itself, which I think is as important as anything; you have to be exposed to it to understand it and to really like it."

Craig added that along with a huge following in China, the NBA and cards are also big in Australia, Spain and the Philippines.

"Out of the four major leagues, the NBA has done a fantastic job with their global reach and they've done it for years and years," said Craig, who noted that Pokémon is the largest media brand in the world.

MINT Co., Ltd. is the leading sports card dealers in Japan. CEO Tatsuo Shinke has watched NBA cards continue to grow over the years in the Asian markets.

"The 1992 'Dream Team' made a huge impact on the Japan market," Shinke said. "Michael Jordan inspired a lot of Japanese people. He came to Japan for a Nike promotion and Charles Barkley and Scottie Pippen appeared on Japanese food and car CM at this era. And one of the most popular Japanese manga, 'Slam Dunk,' was running the same time — 120 million copies of 'Slam Dunk' comic books have been sold so far. The author of 'Slam Dunk' is an NBA fanatic."

The NBA card sensation internationally started in the mid-1990s.

"It's really like '96 to 2005 is the sweet spot," Turner said. "There's a ton of LeBrons, there's a ton of Kobe, and then there's a lot of MJ inserts, parallels, autographs, that kind of thing in there. Then there's Yao in there, Marbury. They have cult-like followings of certain guys, like Marbury's definitely one of them."

HOT CARDS OVERSEAS

NBA cards are hot in Japan, and Shinke and MINT Co. are reaping the benefits.

Though gaming cards are the largest card market in Japan, Shinke said about 20 percent of the company's sales are from NBA cards.

"The size of gaming card market is 20 times larger than the sports card in Japan," Shinke said. "However, we are more of the sports card focus so far."

Shinke said popular players that collectors in Japan go after are Jordan and Bryant. But Japanese collectors also prefer guard players like Allen Iverson, Curry and Ja Morant.

NBA collectors in Japan understand that vintage cards are a better investment than modern cards, but collectors like to watch games and pick up cards of current players that inspire them.

"I guess Japanese collector don't think NBA card as the investment so much, they genuinely enjoy the collection," Shinke said. "So, modern is the king in this market. Living in Japan, it is difficult to see the game on live in the U.S. Most of the NBA fanatics in Japan have never seen a live game in the U.S. Instead of seeing live game, we put our passion into collecting cards or sneakers."

Shinke said Japanese collectors are more into buying packs and boxes than individual singles. Opening wax, not keeping them sealed, is a common practice.

"I would say there is the strong rip habit in Japan," Shinke said. "Japanese baseball cards have over 50 years history. And character stickers are also common for long time. That's why Japan has rip habit."

RC
RUI HACHIMURA
SPECTRA

Once a collector in Japan opens packs, prior to PSA's Japan launch in 2018, they are more likely to keep the cards in raw condition.

"PSA grading has become popular for these four years," Shinke said. "However, people still keep a lot of raw cards, especially modern cards. Grading is more popular in gaming card market in Japan."

Shinke noted that NBA collectors in Japan buy cards on eBay, but Yahoo! Auctions and Mercari are preferred outlets.

Shinke believes NBA collecting in Japan will continue to rise as the years go on, especially with Japanese players now in the league.

"Rui Hachimura and Yuta Watanabe play well in the league now. That is special for us," Shinke said. "I couldn't imagine that Japanese players play in the NBA until they entered the league. They inspire a lot of Japanese people so far. And 'Slam Dunk' is making huge number of basketball fanatics again.

"I feel that huge NBA movement are coming in Japan now. I want to see the NBA and 'Slam Dunk' collaboration trading card. It will boost the movement not only in Japan but also other Asian countries."

Distributing trading cards internationally is a busy business for Ponderosa, Y.S., Ltd. It distributes cards from the NBA, MLB, NFL, WWE, UFC, soccer and much more to retail and hobby shops.

"The demand of NBA cards for Taiwan market is about four million U.S. dollars-plus," Yang said.

Yang noted the most popular basketball products in Taiwan include Prizm, Contenders, Court Kings, Immaculate, National Treasure and Select.

"Most of the collectors enjoy pulling the card boxes but they also buy the individual card they like directly," Yang said. "These two consumer behaviors don't conflict each other. Of course, a part of collectors love to buy card packs and a part of collectors love buying the individual card. In average, it's about 50 percent of each group."

LARGE INTERNATIONAL PURCHASES

Turner is a big-time collector who has had a lot of luck picking up some huge cards through overseas transactions.

He bought a PMG Green Jordan — there are only 10 in existence — overseas and knew it was altered prior to his purchase because it had been graded.

Turner also purchased a PMG Green Bryant from a collector in the Philippines in 2012.

"Most of my big cards have come from there," Turner said.

Preferably, Turner would like a card graded prior to him purchasing it. It gives him a value of what it's worth as well as protects him from fake cards.

The fact that cards are usually raw overseas can cause a big problem.

"I don't think I'm out of line saying this, most of the '90s fakes come from Asia and Canada, believe it or not," Turner said. "For some reason, and I'm not speaking bad of any particular country, other than to say, in Taiwan there's a lot of fake Skybox Star Rubies."

On a lot of Turner's high-dollar purchases internationally, he will use an escrow service or arrange to have one of his friends in a foreign country help broker the deal and arrange an in-person meeting to pick up a card and have it shipped to the United States.

"I'm a huge MJ collector and I bet you a third, maybe even more, of the big cards that I've needed and acquired were sourced from China or Korea or Singapore, the Philippines," Turner said. "The [Kevin] Garnett, the PMG Green that I was able to find last year, that came from Shanghai. I have multiple friends in China who end up helping broker and picking up cards for me.

"I would argue there's more big-dollar collectors with this stuff there than maybe even the U.S. when it comes to high-end basketball. It feels that way."

CHICAGO SPORTS SPECTACULAR

Chicago show features sports legends, high-end cards and thousands of autographed collectibles

The Chicago Sports Spectacular card show delivered a cornucopia of collectibles, with about 10,000 attendees sifting through offerings from hundreds of dealers and meeting about 60 autograph signers.

The annual show had something for everyone, from boxes filled with 10-cent cards to exorbitantly priced collectibles. Case in point: a signed 2022 Panini card of soccer sensation Lionel Messi, graded PSA 9 and priced at $30,000. I was shocked. And I was speechless when the seller suggested I look at another of his relics for sale: a signed 2022 1-of-1 Panini card of Messi. It had a price tag of $375,000.

Nice? Absolutely! But not even remotely an option, though the seller said he could negotiate a little, if interested.

As expected, the Chicago Sports Spectacular, held March 17-19 at the Donald E. Stephens Convention Center in Rosemont, delivered cards aplenty and autographs on everything — even a Chicago Cubs football helmet, signed by Kris Bryant with multiple inscriptions, for $2,500.

There were photos of any number of sizes and stars, and even a 3-foot-tall bobblehead of Tom Brady — one of 17 made — for $3,000. There also was a 3-foot bobblehead of Albert Pujols, one of 37 made, for only $2,750.

The autograph signing slate was impressive, to say the least: Bobby Orr, Julius Erving, Barry Sanders, Dennis Rodman, Dominique Wilkins, Rick Barry, Orlando Cepeda, Roberto Alomar, Jerry Kramer, Ray Bourque, "Mean" Joe Greene, Jim Kaat, Randy White, Gary Payton, Lance Parrish and others.

A few of my favorite finds were:

- The 1969 All-Star Hockey Game: $40.
- A Steve McMichael cut signature, framed with a Super Bowl XX ticket: $250.
- Ric Flair-autographed, high-quality Halloween mask: $300.
- Scott Hall and Kevin Nash dual-signed 8-by-10 photo: $100.
- The 1994 University of Miami football uncut sheet of 12 cards, including Warren Sapp, then-head coach Dennis Erickson and some defensive tackle named Dwayne Johnson.
- A Josh Allen autographed jersey, framed along with two photos of the star Buffalo quarterback ($750), a reminder of the star who led my fantasy football team to the league championship this past season.
- Chicago Blackhawks three-ring set of replica Stanley Cup championship rings with a platform: $100.
- Yadier Molina game-used, autographed Stan Musial Commemorative Base: $10,000.
- Doug Plank autographed 8-by-10 photo: $20.

COOL COLLECTIBLE

After walking through every aisle at the show, I returned to one of the first dealer tables that I spotted. Tom Brode, an Ohio-based dealer, had arguably the most unique item I saw — a signed, framed Patrick Mahomes jersey with two photos of the Super Bowl-winning quarterback in the case. It also included a video screen that shows Mahomes highlights.

"I like items that have history and uniqueness to them. The video brings the history to life and truly makes the item unique," Brode said.

Brode bought a custom framing company weeks before the show and is now looking to bring more such assets to life on the card show scene and beyond. The concept came to life last Christmas when Brode and his wife attended a Tim McGraw concert and he shot video of the singer. He then purchased a McGraw-signed record and ultimately added their video to the framed asset.

The self-made Christmas present became the brainchild for Brode in sports collectibles.

"That's a unique gift for anyone — to relive your memories," he said.

The framing cost $600 and he offers it for anyone and anything, including youth sports. The Mahomes item with the video was selling for $3,500. Brode plans to expand the offerings with video and make the screens larger, too.

"This brings the Man Cave to the next level," he said.

SIDNEY? SURE!

I was hoping to find a Sidney Crosby rookie card. Not for purchase, just to see if I could, in fact, spot a 2005 Upper Deck card (#201) of the Pittsburgh Penguins great, hopefully graded a Gem Mint 10. It was a challenge, especially since a friend collects Crosby and always asks about hockey offerings at shows.

Sure enough, I found a dealer who had two for $4,000 each. A bit higher than you'd find on eBay and elsewhere, but these were nice.

Moments later, I spotted a $10 Funko Pop of Crosby. More likely I'd buy that than the card.
